

THE FUTURE OF REPORTING EUROPE

Call for Participants – Future of Reporting Europe Workshop Berlin 7-10th November 2013

“The future of reporting Europe” will bring together 22 young aspiring journalists and media makers from across the continent between the 7th and 10th of November 2013 in Berlin to discuss a transnational approach to reporting. The workshop will explore ways of collaborating across the continent in order to equip participants with the essential skills to become print and web journalists of the future. The workshop will help young journalists and editors with an interest in Europe to establish a network which will enable them to continue their trans-national collaboration beyond the time spent in Berlin.

The workshop aims to:

- train participants in reporting on European issues from a transnational rather than a national perspective
- educate participants in linking practical reporting and web 2.0 journalism skills with an ongoing discussion on how to write about Europe transnationally
- better equip young aspiring journalists to deal with the demands of reporting to a European audience in a thoughtful, independent-minded way
- strengthen networks between young journalists from different European countries

The workshop will include specific training sessions, reporting sessions from Berlin, daily blogging and social media as well as an editorial forum for a print magazine to be published by Europe & Me.

Participants' profile:

The workshop is open to participants aged 18-30 from all Council of Europe states who have journalistic or media experience or demonstrate significant interest in the topic. The selection of participants will be made by Europe & Me according to the applicants' qualifications and motivation.

Formal requirements:

- are aged 18 to 30 and are living in Europe (Council of Europe states)
- have journalistic or media experience or demonstrate significant interest in the topic
- will participate in the workshop over the whole four days (7th of November to 10th of November)

Participation details

- Travel (incl. Visa), accommodation, food and local transport will be covered by the organizers
- There is a participation fee of 60 euros
